Marine debris is trash that ends up on our shorelines and in our waterways. The majority of this debris consists of plastics that harm aquatic life and pose risks to human health. Puget Soundkeeper works to remove debris while educating the public about the toxic impact of plastic and other forms of pollution. During an average year, this project engages volunteers throughout the Puget Sound region and removes thousands of pounds of abandoned trash.

International Coastal Cleanup

Puget Soundkeeper is the regional coordinator for the Ocean Conservancy's International Coastal Cleanup project, a global campaign to remove marine debris and document findings. This dataset contributes to the Ocean Trash Index, providing a snapshot of marine pollution and informing environmental policy. Puget Soundkeeper publishes and distributes an annual Puget Sound Cleanup Report detailing the types of debris found locally and highlighting local partners.

Seattle Summer Cleanup Series

The Seattle Summer Cleanup Series is made up of three successive summertime events including a fireworks debris removal after the 4th of July show on Lake Union, a cleanup of the University of Washington's Arboretum, and a cleanup focused around South Puget Sound. Each event features shoreline and on-the-water activities as well as a picnic lunch and a fun gift for all volunteers.

Kayak Cleanup Patrols

Through partnerships with the Northwest Outdoor Center and Alki Kayak Tours, Puget Soundkeeper organizes regular kayak cleanups of Lake Union and the Duwamish River. Kayak patrols are frequently filled with youth groups, teams of employees, and other motivated volunteers.
